The commonwealth of Virginia will pay $520,000 to lawyers who successfully challenged the state's ban on same-sex marriage, including $459,000 to Gibson Dunn & Crutcher.

The settlement was filed on Wednesday in the federal district court in Alexandria, Va. The agreement represented a sharp cut in the fees initially put on the table by Gibson Dunn and Virginia Beach, Va.-based firm Shuttleworth, Purnell, Swain, Hardin & Morecock. According to the papers filed with the court, the two firms jointly documented more than $1.7 million in lawyers' time and costs.

The agreement did not mention Boies, Schiller & Flexner, which also worked on the case, Bostic v. Rainey. A Boies Schiller spokesman could not immediately be reached for comment. Representatives of Gibson Dunn and the Virginia attorney general's office also could not immediately be reached.

Gibson Dunn's Theodore Olson and Boies Schiller's David Boies, who joined forces to successfully challenge California's same-sex marriage ban several years ago, led the case for the plaintiffs.

U.S. District Judge Arinda Wright Allen declared Virginia's same-sex marriage ban unconstitutional in February 2014. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld Allen's decision in July. The U.S. Supreme Court denied petitions to hear the case and others from the Seventh and Tenth circuits. The high court recently agreed to take up same-sex marriage cases argued in the Sixth Circuit.

Having successfully sued under federal civil rights law, the plaintiffs were entitled to ask the court to award attorney fees and costs. States that unsuccessfully defended same-sex marriage bans are already on the hook to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars in legal fees to challengers and millions more in fee requests are pending. Lawyers for the plaintiffs in Virginia and the commonwealth asked Allen to delay the schedule for filing a fee petition so that they could try to negotiate an agreement.

In November, lawyers representing a group of plaintiffs who joined the Bostic case notified the court that they had reached a $60,000 settlement on fees. Gibson Dunn and Shuttleworth, which weren't part of that deal, told the court in December that they had reached an agreement in principle on their fees, but the details weren't made public until this week.

Gibson Dunn and Shuttleworth submitted records documenting 2,372 hours spent on the case, totaling $1,738,645 in attorney fees and $5,422 in costs, according to the agreement. According to the plaintiffs' lawyers, that sum represented "voluntary reductions" made by the firms.

The firms agreed to a series of other cuts as part of the settlement, including limiting the hours claimed to members of the "core" legal teams, reducing hourly rates, eliminating time entries for work on positions that were unsuccessful, applying a 20 percent reduction to "block-billed" entries and getting rid of certain time entries that overlapped between the two firms.

Lawyers for the plaintiffs and the commonwealth told the court:

The parties to this settlement agreement continue to dispute the billing rates and charges to which plaintiffs are entitled. But the parties acknowledge the uncertainty and risks to each party associated with litigating a fee petition submitted by plaintiffs, and the range of possible outcomes with regard to the quantum of fees sought. Acknowledging further the legal costs and expense associated with litigating these issues, Rainey and plaintiffs have agreed to resolve their differences through this settlement agreement, each term of which is material to the parties' willingness to enter into it.

The agreement was subject to approval by Virginia Gov. Terry McAuliffe. As of Wednesday, the lawyers told the court, they had "received all of the necessary governmental

Inside Gibson Dunn's Billing Rates in Gay Marriage Case

Zoe Tillman, The National Law Journal

February 12, 2016

Ten Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher partners who successfully fought Virginia's same-sex marriage ban billed hourly rates between $795 and $1,800, according to copies of the firm's billing records obtained by The National Law Journal.

Gibson Dunn's records provide a new look at how the firm managed the Virginia federal case, and how top lawyers—including Ted Olson, Theodore Boulous Jr. and Helgi Walker—billed for their time.

In all, Virginia last year agreed to pay $459,000 to Gibson Dunn for its work for the plaintiffs. By reaching a settlement, the lawyers avoided a public fight over whether their rates and hours were reasonable.

States that unsuccessfully defended same-sex marriage bans in federal court have agreed or been ordered by a judge to pay $13.6 million in legal fees to the challengers.

The Gibson Dunn partners' hourly rates in 2013 and 2014 ranged from $795, for Amir Tayrani in 2013, to a high of $1,800 for Olson, who is a member of the firm's executive committee, according to the firm's billing records.

The NLJ obtained the records under Virginia's public-records law. Successful plaintiffs in civil rights cases are entitled to collect "reasonable" attorney fees. Law firms that fought states over fees in same-sex marriage litigation in most cases publicly disclosed their rates and hours to the court. Gibson Dunn's settlement in the Virginia case meant the firm's records were not publicly filed, but they were submitted to the state attorney general's office.

Olson is one of the highest-paid lawyers in the nation. News reports in 2012 put his hourly rate at $1,800. That rate stayed the same in 2013 and 2014, the billing records show. He did not immediately return a request for comment.

Olson, Tayrani and partner Matthew McGill led the pro-marriage effort for the firm among the partners. Their colleagues joined in for limited purposes. Partner Andrew Tulumello, the co-partner-in-charge of the firm's D.C. office, put in 30 minutes, at an hourly rate of $925, to confer with McGill about class action issues.

Four partners got involved in early 2014 to help Olson prepare for a moot court in May: David Debolt, billing at $885 an hour; Thomas Dupree Jr., billing at $995 an hour; Caitlin Halligan, billing at $970; and Walker, co-chairwoman of the firms' administrative law and regulatory practice, billing at $910. Combined, they logged about 60 hours.

Partner Karen Manos, chairwoman of the firm's government contracts practice, billed 0.7 hours, at an hourly rate of $980, to assist with generating support for an amicus brief. Boutrous, co-chairman of the firm's appellate practice, billed 6.8 hours at an hourly rate of $1,040, doing a mix of issue analysis and reviewing briefs and other related litigation.

Olson clocked more than 178 hours on the same-sex marriage case. His work, according to the billing records, was largely a mix of reviewing briefs and opinions written by other members of the plaintiffs' legal team and preparing for oral arguments, although he did do some writing of his own.

Overall, Gibson Dunn spent more than 1,900 hours on the case in 2013 and 2014, billing $1.5 million. Their co-counsel at Shuttleworth, Ruloff, Swain, Haddad & Morecock in Virginia Beach, Virginia, billed approximately 500 hours, for $218,000 in fees. Shuttleworth received $61,000 in the fee settlement.

Boies, Schiller & Flexner, which also worked on the case, Bostic v. Rainey, handled the case pro bono and did not seek fees, according to partner William Isaacson.

At Gibson Dunn, associates put in the most hours on the Virginia case. Six associates logged more than 1,300 hours in 2013 and 2014, compared to the 500 hours put in by the partners. The associates billed hourly rates between $425 and $740.

To reach the $520,000 settlement, the lawyers told the court that the plaintiffs' legal team agreed to a series of cuts to their hours and rates.

"The parties acknowledge the uncertainty and risks to each party associated with litigating a fee petition submitted by plaintiffs, and the range of possible outcomes with regard to the quantum of fees sought," the lawyers said in a joint statement to the court in January 2015.

"Acknowledging further the legal costs and expense associated with litigating these issues, Rainey and plaintiffs have agreed to resolve their differences through this settlement agreement, each term of which is material to the parties' willingness to enter into it."
